Warrior Black Hawk Carved First Scalp at Age of 15

Leaders to Ask Unlimited Use Of Yank Troops

Aerial Troop Movements To Begin in Two Weeks

From the coded traffic to their lands west of the Mississippi, Mary, Black Hawk among them, failed to migrate, and in 1833, the whites invaded the Black Hawk War, which is best known in the annals of his tribe. Before the war, the Black Hawk War of 1831 cost the government more than two million dollars, a considerable sum in those days, and many lives.

86th Division Named After Indian Brave
Of Eloquence, Dignity

Mokhochenneskiab, Black Sparrow pants, as he is now called, Black Hawk, the Iroquois warrior from whose head the 86th "Black Hawk" division took its name, was not a chieftain among his people nor the son of a chieftain.

He was simply a warrior—wary in the arts of war, a woman in war, a man in war, a veteran in war, a brave in war, a leader in war.

The 86th "Black Hawk" division was named for the famous Iroquois warrior who fought against the British in the Revolutionary War and later fought against the Americans in the War of 1812.

Commanding General

86th Infantry Division
This exploit brought him 160 volunteers when he next offered to lead a war party and 260 volunteers the third time he led one, when he was 79. Black Hawk himself killed five braves and a squaw, and took four scalps on that expedition. His party met an equal number of Chagoes, killing 100 of them with a loss of 25 of their own.

Retired to Migrate
His sympathies were with the British, with whom he traded before and after the war of 1812, and he fought on the British side in that conflict. After the end of the war, the Sauk and Foxes made peace with the government of the United States and Black Hawk confined himself to hunting and fishing for a number of years.

Meanwhile, boundary disputes arose with incoming white settlers. In the winter of 1827, when the Sauk and Foxes were absent from their towns on Rock river, engaged in hunting, eastern white men burned about 50 of their vacant lodges. The Indians rebuilt and lived peacefully in them. In 1829, the federal government ordered the removal of the nation.
